ABSTRACT

Yulitasari, Chintika, The Morphological Acquisition of Second Semester English Learners STAIN Kediri, Thesis, Tarbiyah, English Department, The State College for Islamic Studies Kediri, 2013. Advisors: (1) Fathor Rasyid, M.Pd (2) Nur Afifi, M.App. Ling.

Key Words: second language acquisition, morphological acquisition stages, second semester learners.

The study aims at knowing morphological acquisition of the second semester English learners STAIN Kediri. In second language acquisition, the learners have special linguistic system that is different from both their first and second language called interlanguage. They must get difficulty in acquiring the stage in second language especially in forming words based on the context for they have different rule between Indonesian and English.

This research uses descriptive method to describe how far the students acquire morphological acquisition using the theory of Pienemann. The subject of this research is second semester English learners STAIN Kediri. The instrument of this research is the researcher herself using sources of data from the utterances that are produced by the second semester English learners. Then, the researcher takes the findings and draws the conclusion based on the data found.

The findings in this research, the second semester English learners have acquired five stages of morphological acquisition with the order: single word, formulae, ing, possessive -s, plural -s, adverb -ly, past -ed, generic -s, and 3 person singular. Although they can produce correct word form in those stages, sometimes they still produce incorrect form because they have different word system in their first language. The other finding is that their English mark sometimes cannot be indicator of how far they successful to acquire morphological acquisition stages. This research also strengthens the theory that second language cannot be learned from the rule textually but it also needs application in conversation to make students can master it well naturally. That statement is the suggestion to the lecturers and students themselves as well.
