ABSTRACT

Ima Pratiwi. 2013. The Implementation of AIR (Auditory Intellectual Repetition) Model to Improve the Ability in Writing Descriptive Text of First Grade Students of MA Al Manar Prambon Nganjuk. English Department - Faculty of Education, State College for Islamic Studies, Advisors: (1) Dr. Mukhammad Abdullah M.Ag. and (2) Burhanudin Syaifulloh SS, M.Ed.

Key Words: Teaching writing, Descriptive Text, AIR model

Writing is important to be learnt, because in writing we can explore anything in our mind as we want. Through descriptive text, the students can talk about their experience which is not forgettable. Descriptive text is also kind of genre, which is learned in the first year in Junior High School. This study is conducted to know how the application of AIR (Auditory Intellectual Repetition) model can improve the student's ability in writing descriptive text at first grade students of MA Al Manar Prambon Nganjuk. The student's score in writing descriptive text is low. It appeared that score in writing Descriptive text was still far from the Standard Score of English Subject that is 75. It happened because they could not understand and difficult to describe things. Based on the situation in the classroom, the researcher wants to improve the students' ability in writing descriptive text using the AIR model.

The research design of this study is classroom action research (CAR). CAR consists of planning, acting, observing, evaluating, and reflecting. In this research, teacher do pre cycle and two cycles. Each cycle is done by three meetings. The setting of this study is at MA Al Manar Prambon Nganjuk. The subject of the study is 35 students in the first grade student in class X-1. The researcher uses two instruments; those are observation and writing test.

In cycle 1, teacher explains about the AIR model, and then students look confused about the activity because the method is a new activity for them. Then, the researcher gave an example of descriptive text to help the students in understanding and to make them easy in making the text. After that, the students make an outline of descriptive text based on experience in the observing their school. The last meeting in cycle 1, they are asked to make writing descriptive in the class based on their outline. The result of cycle 1 is not good enough, it is appeared that the average score in cycle 1 is 64,3. It happened because only three student who get 75. Other students are not successful yet. In cycle 2, the students' score is 80,1. So, all of the students could be said success in the learning, because the score is fulfill the standard criterion of success, it is 75. Finally, use the AIR model can improve the students' ability in writing descriptive text.
