ABSTRACT

Komariyah, Binti, 2014. "Teachers and Students' Perceptions toward the Implementation and Significance of English Outing Program". Thesis, English Department, Faculty of Education, State College for Islamic Studies (STAIN) Kediri, Advisors (1) Dr. Mukhammad Abdullah, M.Ag, (2) Burhanudin Syaifulloh, S.S., M.Ed.

Keyword: English Outing Program, Perception, Implementation and Significance.

English Outing program (EOP) is an English practice program that is conducted by English Department of STAIN Kediri. This program is application of Communicative Language Teaching in which it is done outside the class. The committee of this program brought the students to have a trip in tourist area such as Jogjakarta and Bali Island to get in touch with tourists from foreign countries or native speakers. The purposes of this program is to give an opportunity for the students to develop their English communicative competence by getting in touch with native speakers and to give an opportunity for the students to improve their writing skills by making a report trip or English Outing magazine. This program takes important roles in English learning and teaching process because this program gives an opportunity to students in getting in touch with native speakers. That opportunity could not be found in the class. Therefore, it is important to conduct descriptive- survey research to know the teachers and students' perception toward the implementation and significance of English Outing program. Those perceptions could describe whether this program has a good implementation and significance or not. In addition, this study is also aimed to know whether there is difference perception between teachers and students or not.

The subjects of this study are 10 lecturers of English Department who were the committee of English Outing program and 80 students of sixth semester who had followed this program. The design of this study is descriptive- survey research in which it used quantitative approach. The researcher used questionnaire as main instrument to collect data. She also analyzes the data through computing data into SPSS 16.

The results of this study are 90% of teachers and 98.75% of students have positive perception. It can be seen that they got mean score above than 2.5. According to the mean average of both teachers and students' score, the researcher concluded that the respondents have positive perception toward the implementation and significance of English Outing program. In addition, there is no significant different between teachers and students regarding to their perception about English Outing Program. Based on the finding of this study, the researcher hopes that English Department, lecturers and students can take important roles to this program in order to make this program better than before.
