CONCLUSSION AND SUGGESTION

In this chapter presents the conclusion ad suggestion dealing with findings of this research. The researcher presents the conclusion of this research which gives short description and the result of this research. Then, the researcher also present the suggestion related to this research.

A. Conclusion

From the discussion about types of illocutionary acts, the researcher classifies that utterance based on Searle's theory. Searle has five types of illocutionary. They are assertive, commissive, directive, expressive and declarative. After classify the utterances based on Searle's theory, the researcher found 25 utterances which include in illocutionary acts. From five types of illocutionary, expressive is first type which often appears in reader's forum.

Based on the finding data, the researcher found that expressive has 28% from 7 utterances, directive has 24% from 6 utterances, assertive has 20% from 5 utterances, declarative has 16% from 4 utterances, and commissive has 12% from 3 utterances. The most dominant type of illocutionary act found in reader's forum of the Jakarta post is Expressive. It means that the reader who post his/her writings want to express his/her felling to the information or news that he/she had been read in Jakarta Post newspaper.

B. Suggestion

Based on the findings, the researcher proposes the suggestions related to the focus of the study. First, it is recommended to the readers to understand the meaning and the function of the utterance by reading the whole text with the appropriate context. It can avoid the miss perception to someone's opinion.

Writing this thesis is the most memorable experience to the researcher, because of it, the researcher capable done to answer the statement of the problem and know about how the illocutionary act used in reader's forum. The researcher hopes this research can be useful for another researcher and language user especially about speech act and illocutionary act. Therefore the researcher suggest this researcher is able to be useful references for student in English department who interest in discourse analysis especially in speech act theory, thus the student can understand more and will be able to enrich their knowledge about speech act and etc. the researcher realizes that the thesis there are some weaknesses on the types of illocutionary act. Finally the researcher aware that this research still so far from perfection therefore, the researcher hopes for the next researcher to conduct the research using illocutionary act in other fields, like in literary work.
