

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTION

A. Conclusion

The researcher focuses on the types of comparative figurative language and its meaning in the Maybe Someday novel. After analyzing the data, the researcher finds that:

1. There are 34 comparative figurative languages occurred in the novel, they are: nine similes, eleven metaphor, fourteen personifications.
2. The type of personification mostly found in illustration of the thing or the object in the novel. From this, it can be seen clearly that the reason Colleen Hoover uses personification in illustration of the thing or the object in the novel because the researcher believes that personification expression is more easily recognized as the style of language that shows the comparison between two unlike things by giving human attribute to unhuman things. So, the story alive by the readers' imagination.

The conclusion is supported by the result that using comparative figurative language is showing the creation of interesting image, giving language construction, and style. The last, the writer points that understanding the situation of each expression is the most important thing to understand about the meaning.
