

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTION

This chapter presents the conclusion and suggestion of this research.

A. Conclusion

Saroo's bad behavior was influenced by the environment. He saw the behavior of other people, then he remembered it. He did the same behavior later. He couldn't develop his sports talents because no one taught him. Saroo ignored her mother's orders because he wanted to work. Poverty is a trigger for children to rebel against the family. The bad treatment of family member can cause the child to have bad behavior.

The treatment of the parents determines the good or bad behavior of the child. Saroo can study hard to achieve his goals because he received a proper education from his adoptive parents. He was able to develop his sports talents because his adoptive parents taught him various sports.

Communication between children and parents is a vital role in changing children's behavior. It happens to Saroo. Saroo has did two mistakes, so his mother advised him. In addition, his mother also shows sad expression. She says that parents always need their children and they always maintain family harmony. This treatment stimulates Saroo to find his biological family. He also visites his adoptive brother to apologize.

B. Suggestion

The researcher hopes that the result of this research is useful for the reader, especially for educating a child. The reader can gain insight into how to raise a child. Parents can build good communication with their children. So, they can know the problem of children. Future research is expected to analyze the parental treatment on developmental adolescent children.
