

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTION

The researcher provides the result of this study as the conclusion founded on findings and discussion in this chapter. In addition, the suggestion is given to the next researcher to have more improvements in the occupation of study.

A. Conclusion

From the study done by the writer, it is known that in the London has Fallen Movies there are phrase that contain both of types and meaning idiomatic expression. The types of idiomatic expression by (McCarthy & O'Dell, 2010), there are six types of idiomatic expression either it is simile, binomial, proverb, euphemism, cliché, or fixed statement. From those types, in London has Fallen movie found all of the types of idiom. Based on the data analyzed on the study, there are fifty idiomatic expressions. Of the 50 idiomatic expression, 3 data of Simile, 12 data of Binomial, 13 data of Proverb, 14 data of Euphenism, 3 data of Cliff and 5 data of Fixed Sentence. In the findings of this present study, the dominant type is Euphenism with 14 idiomatic expressions.

Whereas for meaning, here researcher find that between lexical meaning and contextual meaning is different is more dominant. Not all lexical meaning is the same as contextual meaning, and not all are also different. This is evidenced that in this study, researcher found several similarities between lexical meaning and contextual meaning, as well as the differences between the two. It is because in interpreting the idiomatic expression between lexically and contextually it is not always the same for the meaning. Thus, the researcher want to see what differences in meaning exist in lexical and contextual meaning in idiomatic expressions.

The last statement problem about the types of idiomatic expression mostly found in the movies, from the six types of idiomatic expression there is one type of idiomatic expression that high frequently used in the movies, namely euphenism types idiom. The data showed that from 50 (fivety) idiomatic expressions 28% of them contain of euphenism idiom. These because euphenism idiom type that refer to situation that offensive or make anger it is same with the context of the movie. Moreover, the data showed that the smallest idiomatic expression used is simile and cliff with three data or 6%.

B. Suggestion

Based on the research's discussion, there are some contributive suggestions that can be recommended. The writer hope, this reseach can be used for future study because provided a foundation for further investigation on idioms. The present study analysed types of idioms and the meaning of idiomatic expression in the movie, and this could be insightful in other areas or leading to the compilation of a glossary or dictionary of lexical and cultural idioms. The research is expected to help in lessons, especially English on idiom expression material.

Moreover, in learning, idiom can be contributed to make readers become more creative in writing and in speaking. The readers are able to make their writing and speaking more colorful and interesting to be read and heard. When readers implement their knowledge about idiom, such as inserting idiom as a joke, it would make the readers get freshen from the tiresome situation. Since the idioms are very easy to be found in the literary work, it is better to readers to read more books or novels and acquire the idioms by self-learning because readers will not have any pressure to learn the idioms, and naturally they will be able to enjoy the moment of learning.

The evidence from this study suggests that the lecturers should teach how to write a thesis conclusion and give more references about writing thesis conclusion because there is no thesis conclusion of the students which exactly matched the Bunton template of thesis conclusion structure. The researcher hope that readers can improve their English idiomatic skills because by using idiomaic, the readers can improve their social life. It will be better if the readers were enthusiast to learn English especially idiom, because can makes the readers have relaxed from standard language that used in regular daily. It also can make readers be more active and improve their English language skill ability
